Your future in arts, humanities and social sciences

Strong industry links to get you ahead

You can be confident that what you learn at Deakin will be relevant to your career. Our courses are developed and reviewed with professional input, meaning they're tailored to what the industry needs right now – and into the future. You'll also have access to various networking opportunities, as our School of Humanities and Social Sciences has strong partnerships with government as well as several high-profile non-government organisations such as Save the Children.

Practical, real-world learning

Practice your skills in a real-world environment and experience current industry practices through a range of practical experiences embedded in Deakin's courses, to ensure you graduate work ready. Many of our arts, humanities and social sciences degrees include the option to undertake a professional internship with a government, private sector, non-government or community organisation.<sup>1</sup>

Enjoy a world-class education

A range of arts subjects at Deakin are ranked in the top 1% of university subjects in the world, including:

- arts and humanities
- philosophy
- politics
- social sciences and management
- sociology.

This is according to the prestigious QS World University Rankings (2020), which is one of the most influential and widely observed annual international university rankings.

Your future in arts, humanities and social sciences

Broaden your knowledge

Open up a world of career options by studying an arts degree. There's plenty of flexibility within the arts so you can pursue your interests through various specialisations and work placements.

You can also explore combined degrees to complete both courses in as little as four years. For example, combine politics and policy studies with nutrition, for a career in health policy in the Bachelor of Health Sciences/ Bachelor of Arts.

Learning at Deakin through COVID-19 and beyond

As a leader in digital learning, we know our students value Deakin's connected and engaging online study environment and we also understand that many students value attending campus. At Deakin, you can be confident of not just a COVIDSafe environment, but a tailored, collaborative learning experience for each course, designed to achieve the best possible combination of online and on-campus activities whilst adhering to government regulations.

Dynamically delivered, world-class learning – it's what Deakin does best. Find out more at deakin.edu.au/learning-at-deakin-through-covid-19.

Criminology students prepare for industry through career seminars with current criminology professionals who discuss their roles and offer advice.

Learn from leaders in their fields

Our teaching staff are passionate professionals, recognised as innovators in their fields, which means you'll learn from the very best. Our academic staff are active in the media and conduct important research, making a positive impact in Australia and around the world.

Gain international experience

Experience new cultures, create networks across the world and gain credit towards your degree with an international experience in a range of destinations or online.<sup>1</sup> You could pursue opportunities like:

- internationally focused internships
- language study
- social enterprise projects
- study tours
- trimester exchange programs
- volunteering opportunities.

Explore our immersive precinct

Learn in collaborative new ways and experience concepts, locations and global topics that are usually inaccessible through classroom learning, in the Nyaal precinct at the Geelong Waurn Ponds Campus.

The Nyaal is a cutting-edge, interactive learning environment with a 360-degree theatre, collaborative think tank and event space. Students from disciplines including communication, criminology, education and history can gain valuable interactive experience before heading out into the professional world.

'In my seminars at Deakin, I've been exposed to industry professionals who collaborate with us to develop our writing. The growth and experience I've gained as a writing student has made the idea of getting published while still at university a tangible goal.'

Maddie Brake
Bachelor of Arts (Literary Studies and Creative Writing) student

Learn a language and expand your world

Study one or more of some of the world's most strategically important languages – Arabic, Mandarin Chinese, Indonesian and Spanish. Each of these languages are in the top 10 most widely spoken languages in the world.

Language learning at university can be highly rewarding and offers potential for intercultural engagement and overseas travel.<sup>1</sup> Each of our languages offer in-country study options, where students' skills will be accelerated through total immersion. You may choose to study a language as a major or minor within your degree, or add-on a specialist language diploma alongside your undergraduate studies. Further opportunities include international internships and professional placements, with many employers recognising the value of language learning combined with international experience.

#1 Victorian university for student satisfaction

Year on year, our students are the most satisfied students of all Victorian universities.<sup>2</sup> We've ranked this highly for the past 10 years, with students being particularly happy with our:

Disciplines

Take a look through our disciplines (also known as study areas) to choose your area of expertise. Knowing which discipline you're interested in helps career practitioners find the best course for you. Corresponding courses are featured on the following pages, so you can learn more about what you'll study, available professional work experience opportunities and the types of careers you could pursue. Once you have chosen a course, you can then pick which discipline to specialise in within that course. Visit deakin.edu.au for detailed discipline and course information, including a description of the units within each degree.

Anthropology

What does it mean to be human? Anthropologists ask and strive to answer this question by studying humanity in the broadest sense. We analyse the lives of people in a range of societies and gain insights into the science behind human existence to understand how we relate to our environments. Our award-winning teaching staff are embedded in a vibrant community of practitioners, industry partners, PhD and Postdoctoral Research Fellows, as well as international networks that grant you access to a world beyond your current horizons. Studying anthropology can lead to careers in the public sector, the humanitarian industry, social welfare agencies, politics, journalism, education, video-game design, medical research, disaster preparedness and documentary film-making.

Arabic

Australia's trade with the Middle East has more than doubled in the past decade, making it an increasingly important region with broad strategic, economic, religious and cultural influence. Develop Arabic language fluency and enhance it through an understanding of Middle Eastern history, culture and society.

Learning Arabic language skills will give you a competitive edge and expand your employment options far beyond Australian shores to exciting and challenging positions in the Arab Gulf States, the Middle East and North Africa.

Chinese

Expand your international options by studying Chinese, one of the five official languages of the United Nations and the second-most spoken language in the world. China is also one of Australia's biggest trading partners and Standard Chinese, commonly known as Mandarin Chinese, will equip you to forge and maintain valuable relationships.

Criminology

Criminology explores why and how some behaviours are defined as 'criminal' within society. It also considers ways to minimise crime and harm, and critically examines existing criminal justice policies, practices and institutions. To consider questions of justice, criminology draws on a number of disciplines including psychology, law, sociology, history and politics.

Deakin's dedicated criminology courses are the most established in Victoria, so you'll be assured you're learning from the best. Designed in conjunction with professional bodies including Victoria Police, the Department of Justice and Community Safety Victoria, and the Australian Institute of Professional Intelligence Officers, the course covers a wide variety of criminology topics, including cyber security, surveillance, anti-terrorism and policing.

Gender and sexuality studies

Whether in the public or private spheres, sex, gender and sexuality are prominent features of human existence, identity and self-expression. In this discipline you will learn about the importance of gender and sexuality to your own life and that of others. You will develop the skills to research, analyse and discuss expressions of gender and sexuality in different historical periods and in different cultural contexts, from feminism to queer theory and beyond. Studying in this discipline will help to prepare you for work in a range of areas, including policy development, public advocacy, museums and archives, health and education.

Geography and society

Are you curious about key geographical concepts and techniques that stimulate new ways to analyse and solve critical field-based problems? Consider some urgent questions and issues: What should justice look like in a pandemic-affected world? What is the future of cities? What are the impacts of climate change? Why are natural disasters appearing to be more frequent or intense and who is the most vulnerable? Geography and society at Deakin blends the theorisation of place, mobility and human-environment relationships with political practices and policy interventions that produce a better world. Be a geographer! Use your spatial thinking and creative digital skills to change the world through planning and policy jobs – city futures, place-making, disaster resilience, healthcare, heritage, everyday equalities, education and sustainable development.

History

Understand the makings of the modern world with history at Deakin. You'll explore historical events of the last two centuries such as world history of the 20th century, 19th and 21st century Australian history (including Indigenous-settler encounters), European history, Asian, American and Pacific histories and gender in history. You'll be taught by Deakin's renowned historians, who are at the forefront of bringing history into public conversations.

Indigenous studies

Indigenous studies at Deakin builds understanding, recognition and validity of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Peoples' ways of Valuing, Being, Knowing and Doing. You will explore ways you can help co-contribute to positive reconciliation efforts with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Peoples in the context of self-determination and social justice, and build transferable knowledge and vital communication skills. Delivered by Indigenous academic staff, this minor area of study facilitates a deeper understanding of Australia's multiple histories to foster productive and meaningful relationships in culturally diverse communities, especially with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Peoples.

Indonesian

As the national language of the largest country in South-East Asia, learning Indonesian in the Australian context makes good sense. Strong links between Australia and Indonesia offer significant opportunities for engagement. You'll also learn about Indonesian history and culture to develop a deeper understanding of the Indonesian nation and its people. Study options may include intensive language programs in Indonesia offering enhanced opportunities for experiential learning and intercultural engagement.

Be rewarded for your hard work

A Deakin scholarship is more than just a financial boost. It is our chance to acknowledge your accomplishments and reward your hard work, setting you on the path to success at university.

Our extensive scholarship program includes three key scholarships:

- Vice-Chancellor's Academic Excellence Scholarship
- Deakin Scholarship for Excellence
- Deakin Student Support Scholarship.

We also offer a range of donor and government-funded scholarships. Each is unique with differing criteria, rewarding aspiring students from diverse backgrounds.

<sup>1</sup> Australian Graduate Recruitment Industry Awards 2017, 2018, 2019 winner for most popular career service in Australia.

Disciplines

International relations

Enhance your understanding of the key political dynamics of our time. International relations encompasses the study of policy-related dynamics such as diplomacy, foreign policy and global governance, as well as theoretical dynamics relating to questions of order, justice and resistance in world politics. It also considers questions relating to the changing nature of world politics, evident in emerging forms of regionalism and globalisation.

Language and culture studies

Learn the language and cultural context of some of the world's most strategically important languages – Arabic, Chinese or Indonesian. You may have unique opportunities to study overseas as part of your degree for a truly immersive learning experience.<sup>1</sup> Learning a language can be fun and rewarding and builds transferable career skills like interpersonal communication.

Middle East studies

Deakin is at the forefront of Australian universities to offer a major in Middle East studies, meaning we are able to give you a comprehensive understanding of the events and issues shaping the region. With an emphasis on both historical and contemporary issues relevant to the analysis of the Middle East, you'll explore the region's position in the international system.

Philosophy

Philosophy is an activity of thought, more than it is a body of settled knowledge. It raises questions about matters of fundamental concern and tries to answer these questions by opening up to and being guided by the best possible arguments. Philosophy at Deakin asks questions about the nature of reality, truth and knowledge, meaning, the existence of God, personal identity, the good in ethical and political life, and the value and power of art. At the same time, it fosters the development of skills in critical and creative thinking, argumentation, communication, problem-solving and research.

Politics and policy studies

Enhance your understanding of the big issues in the world today and develop the skills to make a difference in your lifetime. You'll investigate the challenges posed to Australia and the world by climate change; asylum seekers and refugees; development; inequality; political parties and new social movements; and threats to democracy. Examine the ideas behind the policy and the rhetoric – and look globally for different solutions; investigate how policy lessons are learned; and assess the impact on domestic and global politics.

Take your studies beyond the classroom

Study a Bachelor of Arts and have the option to take part in a global experience.<sup>1</sup> Unique opportunities may include:

- global study tours
- global volunteering projects
- in-country language study in Oman, China, Indonesia, or Spain
- individual or team professional internships in a range of destinations or online
- social enterprise team internships in Borneo and Vietnam.

'All of my lecturers and tutors have been extremely knowledgeable about the course content and many have industry experience which I have been able to tap into. The learning environment has been very positive from my experience. I am a hungry learner and I have been blessed with classmates and teaching staff who have helped me satisfy my craving for knowledge.'

Alex Syrian

Bachelor of Arts (Arabic, Visual Arts, Digital Media) student

Professional experience and practice

We live in a rapidly changing world on the cusp of an employment revolution. While many of the jobs of today won't exist in the future, many of the jobs of the future don't yet exist today. How, then, can you best prepare for a career path that remains largely unknown? This study area focuses on career development, experiential learning and is organised around four themes: self-awareness, opportunity awareness, decision making and in the middle and final years, work-integrated learning.

Religious studies

Understanding religion has seldom been as important as it is today. There is increasing dialogue among the greater religions of the world, but there is also increasing misunderstanding of religious traditions – one's own and other people's. Religious studies at Deakin explores religion from diverse viewpoints, with units from the disciplines of anthropology, philosophy, sociology, literary and cultural studies, and others.

Sociology

Study society, social groups and social relations. Sociology is the study of the processes that create, maintain and change social groups. It explores ways of thinking about personal and public issues in modern social life and how to link them together through the study of society and social relations.

Spanish

Spanish is a major international language with more than 538 million speakers across five continents. It is also the national language of more than 20 countries and the fourth most widely spoken language in the world, in addition to being an official language of the United Nations and the European Union. In Australia, Spanish is one of the nine most common languages (excluding English) spoken in the home (ABS Census data 2016).

Develop your Spanish-language skills to build a global career. Learning a language will give you insight into different cultures, develop your adaptability and communication skills, and ultimately make you more employable.

Sport and society

Sport's prominent role in society can be traced back to the ancient Olympics in Greece more than 2700 years ago. Today, sport enjoys ever-increasing popularity and influence, with a profound impact on society from cultural, social, educational, political and economic perspectives.

Explore key issues surrounding sport's role – past and present – in the modern world in a structured and meaningful way. Through an interdisciplinary approach, you'll discover a rich and diverse blend of units from history, sociology, education, business and health.

Sustainability and society

Environmental and social sustainability are critical to our collective future, informing private and public sector behaviour and decision-making, as well as personal attitudes and practices. Competing agendas, values, and expectations complicate the path towards a sustainable future and require careful consideration. Intersecting factors include the environmental, economic, and political dimensions, as well as those relating to spirituality, cultural heritage and public health and wellbeing, among others. This minor sequence gives you a broad understanding of how sustainability is conceptualised and engaged in different parts of society, and teaches the necessary skills in critical analysis, political critique and problem-solving to grapple with the environmental challenges that face us now and in the future.

Honours

If you value independent thinking and are looking for a pathway to research degrees and enhanced career opportunities, the Bachelor of Arts – Advanced (Honours) could be ideal for you. This course includes a fourth year of specialised study in which you will conduct in-depth research on a topic you're passionate about and develop advanced research skills and disciplinary knowledge through coursework.

Alternatively, students who undertake a Bachelor of Arts may also choose an optional honours year with the Bachelor of Arts (Honours).

Our experienced academics will supervise you as you work on your thesis and engage with the wider discourse around your chosen topic. You'll improve your critical and constructive thinking and gain practical research skills you can use in a range of private and public sectors to positively impact issues you care about. Areas of research include anthropology, children's literature, criminology, gender and sexuality studies, history, international relations, languages, literary studies, Middle East studies, philosophy, politics and professional and creative writing and sociology.

NIKERI Institute

The National Indigenous Knowledges, Education, Research and Innovation (NIKERI) Institute provides flexibly structured Deakin courses to Indigenous Australian students. Our Bachelor of Arts (page 8) course is offered through Community Based Delivery – a mix of on-campus intensives and online learning at home. This means students can access higher education while maintaining their work, community and family commitments.

Indigenous Studies

All Deakin students can enrol in Indigenous Studies units through the NIKERI Institute. These units give you a comprehensive and engaging exploration of the history, culture and identity of Australia's First Nations People.

Taken as an elective in any course, these units promote diversity and cultural understanding and help to build a well-rounded degree. They're also valued for their transferable knowledge and the way they build vital communications skills.

Pathways

There are many different ways you can get into an undergraduate course at Deakin. In fact, many students choose to take a pathway. If you are interested in studying at university but unsure whether you'll meet the entry requirements for a bachelor degree, then look no further than Deakin's Associate Degree of Arts. We've designed this course to offer students a supported learning environment and a pathway into Deakin's Bachelor of Arts or Bachelor of Criminology.

Associate Degree of Arts

'Studying online allows you to study whenever, wherever and however you like. Deakin's online learning platform allows you to feel as though you are learning from within a classroom, even though you are sitting at your desk at home. Ask anything as though you are in a classroom on campus from the comfort of your own home.'

Benjamin Hall
Bachelor of Criminology/Bachelor of Laws graduate

Combined courses

A combined course lets you pursue complementary studies in both degrees while exploring particular areas of interest to you. For example, combining an arts degree with a law degree enhances your understanding of the context in which the law operates. You can study areas such as history, sociology, philosophy, politics or literature in addition to law studies. Combined courses also let you complete both courses in as little as four or five years, which is quicker than completing one degree followed by the other.
